

I sure am unhappy about Sinclair Broadcasting Group's decision to force its stations to air "Stolen Honor" right before the election. This seems like a clear violation of the spirit of the broadcasting license. In return for getting a broadcasting license, corporations are supposed to serve the public. Airing a slanted documentary in an attempt to influence the election does not qualify.

This seems to illustrate the dangers of media consolidation. Please do not give Sinclair a green light for any future actions. They have not earned their license.
